Issue #32

August 30, 1986

The new game is filled and begins in this issue. Good luck to all you back-stabbers.

It would appear that I'm not destined to be a home owner, at least not at the moment. The mortgage company had approved the loan, and the deal was ready to be closed, but it turned out that none of the mortgage insurance companies wanted anything to do with the house. The reason for this, I'm told, is they didn't like what the appraiser said about the area: "The neighborhood is bounded on the north by commercial strip, on the west by multiple family, and on the south by office... The site is in the middle of prior multiple zoning which has been rezoned to residential single family by court order. Single family use with some adverse effect on marketability due to mixed zoning." Oh, well, that's the way it goes sometimes. I'm not really too upset about it. The more I learned about the house, the less I liked it. Had I really been in love with the place, I could've scraped up the 20% down payment required by the mortgage company to get a loan without mortgage insurance. But I'd rather just start over with a new house, one more likely to go up in value. Stay tuned for further details...

I'm short on space this month, so let's get right to the games. Standby pool for regular Dip: Henry, Hugh Christie, Gonsalves, Holley, Bakken, Fleming, O'Brien, Van Wie, Acheson. For WWIIb: O'Brien, Van Wie. Does anyone want to be added to or removed from either list?

Dealer South

Both sides vulnerable

South	West	North	East
1♦	Pass	1♠	2♣
3♦	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Here is the solution to last issue's problem. West, your partner, led a club against the four heart contract. You won and tried to cash another club, but South ruffed. South then cashed the diamond ace and ruffed a diamond, partner following with the queen and nine to show a holding of queen-jack-ten-nine.

You should have a pretty good picture of the distribution by now. The play marks South with ace-king-seventh of diamonds and a stiff club. And the bidding marks him with ace-king-fourth of hearts. If his last card is also a heart, you cannot defeat the contract. You must hope it is a spade, so the cards will be distributed as shown in the diagram.

Now that you've figured out the distribution, how should you defend? If you refuse to overruff the diamond, South can make his contract. He'll return to his hand with a trump honor and ruff another diamond to establish them. This time it will not matter whether or not you overruff. South will sooner or later get back on lead with his other trump honor to run diamonds. All you will get is a trump trick and the black aces.

To defeat this contract, you must attack declarer's trump holding immediately. You should overruff the diamond, cash the spade ace, and lead another club. At this point, these cards remain:

South needs the rest of the tricks. To get them, he will have to ruff another diamond to set up that suit. But he will first have to draw your trumps, for he cannot allow you to overruff again. So, when you lead a club at trick six, South might ruff in hand, draw trump, and ruff a diamond in dummy. But he will then find he is in the wrong hand with no way back to his good diamonds. He'll have to lead spades from dummy, ending up down two at least. It won't help South much to ruff your club lead in dummy. Now when he draws trump, dummy's trump will also be exhausted, leaving him with a diamond loser.

The Scoreboard

The math puzzle was solved by Matt Chen and Bruce Linsey, who both earn 100 points. Pat O'Brien scored 95, and Pat Jensen got 94. Steve Langley, unfortunately, solved the problem correctly except for the fact that he overlooked that the spheres were of unit radius, not diameter. This cost him heavily in the scoring, as he received only 66 points for this. By the way, Bruce Linsey, 73 Ashuelot St. #3, Dalton, MA 01226 says he will send anyone a copy of his solution if you send him a SASE. The current standings are now:

1. Steve Langley - 658 points	5. Chuff Afflerbach - 210 points	9. Pat Jensen - 94 points
2. Bruce Linsey - 635 points	6. Pete Kurucz - 180 points	10. Paul Milewski - 90 points
3. Matt Chen - 500 points	7. Joel Peacher - 100 points	11. Melinda Holley - 70 points
4. Jim Lawniczak - 325 points	8. Pat O'Brien - 95 points

Steve Langley and Matt Chen were the only ones to try the bridge problem. They both earned 40 points for their answers. The current standings in the bridge competition are now:

1. Steve Langley - 157 points
2. Matt Chen - 113 points
3. Jim Lawniczak - 100 points
4. Marc Peters - 47 points

PRESS — Marseilles (Reuters): Reports coming out of this city indicate that there is some concern among the populace over the rumors that the French government, unable to defend the country against the combined Anglo-Prussian onslaught, would turn the defense of this southern seaport over to the Italian Armed Forces. The mayor of Marseilles, reached for comment earlier today in his private bomb shelter in the suburbs, said that distasteful as an Italian occupation might be, it would be infinitely preferable to an invasion by the Anglo-Saxon/Teutonic horde. "Holy cow, I've heard that they have reptilian heads and eat children, like, they're not even human. Geez, it'd be terrible if they took us over, terrible. Yup," he was quoted as saying.
